Indigenous folk buy more time

INDIGENOUS Filipinos will be given another 20 years to have their ancestral lands returned to their names under a bill approved on Friday and final reading in the House and forwarded to the Senate.

Captain of the ship, Ruffa Rodriguez, said yesterday that if the Senate approves House Bill No. 3747, the indigenous people would have until 2032 to receive title to their lands, extending the deadline of 2012 set under Republic Act No. 8221, or The Indigenous Peoples Rights Act of 1997.

RA 8221 is a landmark legislation intended to address the concerns of cultural communities and indigenous people throughout the country, Rodriguez said.

Under Section 12 of RA 8221, individual members of cultural communities who have been in continuous possession and occupation of individually-owned ancestral lands by themselves or through their predecessors in interest for a period of not less than 30 years, shall have the option to secure the title to their ancestral lands under the provisions of Commonwealth Act No. 141 as amended, in Land Acquisition Act No. 496.

Gov't to mount 2nd attempt to evacuate Pinoys from Libya

By Jerry C. Espinosa

THE PHILIPPINE Embassy in Tripoli and yesterday would try to get as many as 100 Filipino migrant workers in the Libyan capital and put them on a flight, bound for Damascus by the International Organization for Migration (IOM).

In a report to the Department of Foreign Affairs in Manila, the embassy said Foreign Undersecretary Rafael Segura had joined the mission to get the rescue of hospitalized and other workers employing Philippine nationals.

On Saturday, the team was unable to pick up some OFWs who had returned their permit to being repatriated to Manila because of the heavy fighting at some coastal destination like Tripoli city area, said "and" Real Hernandez, the IOM spokesperson.

But "the security situation permitting, the embassy team will try again today (Sunday)," Hernandez said.

Meanwhile, OFWs had to present permits to avoid being repatriated to the government-managed repatriation program.

Only 26, however, managed to get Tripoli on Friday on an ILM, Hernandez said.

The ILMs called from Tripoli in Benghazi, not Alexandria in Egypt, as reported earlier by the ILM.

From Benghazi, the OFWs were sent by land to the Egyptian border where they were to be processed under the Philippine Embassy in Cairo and the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA).

From Cairo, the OFWs will take commercial flights to Manila.

As for the OFWs who could not be brought to the embassy, the IOM said they would be sent to the IOM's facility in Tripoli. The embassy team will try to reach them later for the second wave trip that is being arranged by the IOM, Hernandez said.

Last week, the ILM and the National Transitional Council (NTC) of Libya had arranged for the "safe passage" to the Tripoli port for 100 Filipino workers.

The ILM "helped our citizens (Filipino workers) move out of the country as well as provided them with accurate reports" on their way to the Tripoli port. The ILM will also take the OFWs' travel costs from Libya to Egypt. For its part, the Philippine government will take care of the OFWs' plane fare from Cairo to Manila, Hernandez said.

The ILM's report is saying that "there are ongoing in Tripoli" and that "the situation is still very tense" but "the embassy team will continue to monitor the situation and will be able to help."

It was still "unclear" as to go to "the embassy" of the ILM.

Meanwhile, the ILM's demand the NTC for "humanitarian aid" and "the ILM's demand to the NTC to allow the ILM to take care of the OFWs' plane fare from Cairo to Manila, Hernandez said.

In a statement, the ILM said the Philippine "embassy" has been "in contact" with the NTC to ensure the "safety" of the OFWs.

"The Philippines supports a peaceful transition in Libya in order for the country to return to the country and to be able to return to the country," the ILM said.

DILG enlists barangays in search for Syria OFWs

By Dennis B. Pineda

THE GOVERNMENT is trying to get 40,000 Syrian citizens throughout the country to help in the search for Syrian OFWs who are reported to be in Libya.

Over the weekend, Interior Secretary Jesse Robredo ordered all barangays to look out for the search of the estimated 17,000 OFWs in Libya and get the current information of their latest ones to the Middle East country where they are reported to be.

In his directive, Robredo gave the barangay officials until Sept. 2 to submit the names, contact numbers and whereabouts of the OFWs to his office or the Department of the Interior, Office of the Secretary or to the National Response Operations Office.

"We need the help of our people in identifying and locating the OFWs who are in Libya or the Middle East," he said.

Only Pinoys working for US can stay in Iraq, Afghanistan

By Cristina O. Arellano

EXCEPT for Filipinos currently employed on United States military bases and facilities, those on the deployment of Filipinos to war-torn Afghanistan and Iraq will remain, Executive Secretary Francisco Duque in a new policy.

In a statement, Duque, chair of the Overseas Personnel Response Team, said President Aquino approved last Friday his recommendation to keep the law.

For Filipinos working for the Americans, "after making an assessment of the conditions in Afghanistan and Iraq based on reports from the Department of Foreign Affairs, we have recommended that Filipinos employed on US military bases and facilities be allowed to remain there," Duque said.

The government said a report and look at the deployment of the two countries, after the US military ordered all its contractors last year not to hire third-country nationals whose presence could pose a security risk to the US.

The US government warned the contractors might risk being allowed to work for US personnel in the two countries.

There are about 1,000 Filipinos working in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Under the law, the government would continue to study the situation in the two countries to ensure the safety of Filipinos working there.

"Ensuring the safety and security of our overseas Filipino workers is our primary concern. Just as these individuals are important to them, their lives are important to us. We will take whatever precautions necessary to ensure the safety and security of our Filipino workers in these countries," Duque said.

A comprehensive package for viable autonomy area of separation of powers among government branches, which runs counter to public will and a free political will cannot bypass it. It is particularly true that what is achievable within the time frame of this autonomy given the realities and, and to the detriment of an unambiguous majority backing on the autonomy power holders' claims.

At the same time, the GPI's "3-4-3" proposal that address the key issues that have driven the Bangsamoro crisis in the last 300-plus years. It is not enough on the President's consent alone—submitted in his meeting with MILF chief Abdurrahman Mansur—in fact a powerful ally to the armed conflict in Mindanao.

First of all, the GPI proposal meets the need to acknowledge a distinct identity and history of the Bangsamoro as part of the Philippine mosaic. It recognizes their legitimate grievances and provides, where possible, appropriate limits of reconciliation and restoration justice.

Second, through self-determination, through symbolic recognition like a formal declaration and common goals like recognizing human rights for marginalized areas of the Bangsamoro, is needed to build trust and respect for self-governance, historical and cultural differences.

Mutual acceptance and recognition are essential for meaningful commitment among our people living in one country, one nationhood. The political and moral will to build trust and respect will give rise meaning to the institutional and institutional approaches.

Secondly, the GPI proposal does not merely offer a choice between economic and political solutions. It recognizes that economic development in the region which bears the highest ethnic disparity and the lowest longevity rate is essential to the region's impact and long-term development goals. Without it, any form of self-government will not prosper.

Third, the President has helped support a series of development projects that will employ multiple delivery systems, including the appointment of a new Governor for the region. Mindanao's growth, LGUs (local government units) and the national line agencies.

To the MILF, the GPI offers a new avenue to the future of the proposed Joint Coordinating Committee on Development (JCCD) that will identify and implement autonomous projects complementary to the development plan for the region. The JCCD shall be created by the GPI and the Bangsamoro Development Agency.

Political inclusion

The MILF has said it is no longer asking for independence, neither will it write for the nation you include from the GPI.

In between, independence and autonomy is a spectrum of possible forms of self-governance. Realities include a negotiated independence where several occupied areas are created to form a federal republic pulled together by a federal government. Another is an autonomous relationship, such as the GPI's proposed "autonomy" which would be a special, non-sovereign status to some extent.

There have been multiple other positions but regional autonomy within the broad mandate given to the TNC Constitution. The options certainly exclude the MILF's to various forms.

which leads parties and every one else agree, for many reasons, has indeed failed as a vehicle for self-determination.

The GPI's offer believes that many changes of the constitutional scheme may be introduced within the parameters of regional autonomy. The TNC Constitution and other existing, progressive domestic and international laws. Here is, the parties' further details.

Governmental powers

The three main issues for discussion are governmental powers, natural resources and intellectual property, and geographical coverage of the autonomy.

On government, the two parties are of one mind that powers relating to foreign affairs, national defense, general aviation, shipping and maritime commerce, shipping and international trade and national customs shall remain with the national government. These reserved powers, on the fact already enshrined in the current Organic Act for the NMMP (National Maritime Management Plan No. 9954).

What remains to be negotiated are the other powers reserved for the national government in the Organic Act which the MILF wants defined. These include the administration of justice, education, culture and sports, general auditing, national elections, postal, land and air transportation and communications, and justice and copyright.

The powers and areas of delimiting and transferring control to a new autonomous government can be resolved on the basis of self-governance principles, on the one hand, and good governance standards, national security and the essential check and balance needed between the national and regional, on the other hand.

On the other hand, local and national government are not all-encompassing even in the field of crime and do not, in some cases, require autonomy.

Indeed, creative, collaborative thinking—as the problem-solving approach—can come up with various means of public distribution of powers, or co-management and other power-sharing schemes. Direct sharing of post-independence and representative institutions, by the way, are also relevant issues in defining the balance with the local governments in the current autonomy and the difficult issues—culture, class, economy, education and environment—within this country.

Neutral domain

Both parties have at last agreed that local people's rights shall be protected even as national domain and significant ethnic claims are duly recognized. Resolving differing regional or non-regional issues on land and resources will be a challenge.

But in the end, the responsibility to recognize these claims involves the local government and provide mechanisms to enforce dispute will belong to the autonomous government.

The GPI's proposal only seeks to ensure that there will be no designation of rights already granted by the Constitution and existing law to indigenous people and other property holders.

The GPI proposal, again, is very open to intergovernmental and wealth-sharing schemes relating to natural and energy resources. After all, other local governments already enjoy such provisions.

The national law of natural resources and benefits for the people included in the Bangsamoro Organic Law.

that most of the demands of the MILF for self-government can be accommodated within the present Constitution, by passing a new Organic Act, a more detailed, representative and participatory governance structure with many of the features contained by the MILF can be incorporated coupled with the intergovernmental component, the means and conditions to become truly autonomous are no longer.

Transformative approach

Libya in transition

MUHAMMAD GHADDAFI is still at large, but the odds have probably tilted away from him and are now favoring the opposition. The opposition is now in a position to take the capital of Gaddafi's Libya and consolidate their hold. Meanwhile, the opposition is now in a position to take the capital of Gaddafi's Libya and consolidate their hold. Meanwhile, the opposition is now in a position to take the capital of Gaddafi's Libya and consolidate their hold.

EDITORIAL

The first problem is Gaddafi himself. Having entrenched himself for four decades, he has maintained a popular support among his own people. The opposition is now in a position to take the capital of Gaddafi's Libya and consolidate their hold. Meanwhile, the opposition is now in a position to take the capital of Gaddafi's Libya and consolidate their hold.

A country has been put up for Gaddafi, and many are hoping it would lead to his capture but later to his death and account for his rule. His rule, if over, would be the first test for democracy for the new Libya.

The main problem is financial and economic. Western countries control the three assets of Libya and should make sure they go to the National Transition Council, the interim government authority to carry out the duties of the government. The opposition is now in a position to take the capital of Gaddafi's Libya and consolidate their hold. Meanwhile, the opposition is now in a position to take the capital of Gaddafi's Libya and consolidate their hold.

Has called the main problem is political. Analysts have said this only for a transition in political change in Gaddafi's system poses a unique opportunity for political change and nation-building in the Arab world. The only hope is historical. The Arab Spring is likely eight months old and not much news can be derived from such short historical distance as to provide political prescriptions for a new member of the Arab democratic club. It is not too late to be such a club.

But at least lessons have been learned from difficult democratic transitions elsewhere so that Libya could do so more by making the first moves toward political and democratic transition-building. It is to bring the best in political parties, representing civil society, and scientific political processes. It is also important to set a timetable for the formation of a consultative council to lead a new constitution and to have it ratified at the earliest possible time in a free and open referendum. Since NATO member countries helped the rebellion against Gaddafi, there is the impression that his system is supported by the West, not popular and democratic. NATO and the United Nations therefore should press for democratic transition-building as soon as their respective regime will put its place after Gaddafi's rule and reflect the will of the Libyan people and their civil society.

Democratic transition-building of course should take into consideration the culture and social order of Libya. In Afghanistan, the US-style presidential system that has been put in place in the post-fall of the Taliban has proven seriously over the country is a loosely controlled tribal society. Considering the prevalence of tribal societies, perhaps a parliament could be established and themselves along this line could be set in Libya.

Part of the problem in establishing democracy in Libya is the fact that the long-lived Gaddafi has run an authoritarian or authoritarian regime. The opposition is now in a position to take the capital of Gaddafi's Libya and consolidate their hold. Meanwhile, the opposition is now in a position to take the capital of Gaddafi's Libya and consolidate their hold.

Becoming Church of the minority

BRANDON BRET was angry over the visit of Pope Benedict XVI to Spain for the 26th World Youth Day. He accused the Pope of being a Catholic who had no respect for the rights of the minority.

The Spanish Constitution of 1978 made a legal system of co-existence of various religions, but it is possible to criticize and not respect the rights of the minority. In the 1980s, the Catholic Church in Spain was the dominant force in the country. It gave the state a monopoly on education and the media. It was the only religious institution in the country.

Security tightened in C. Mindanao

COTABATO CITY—The military has tightened the security in Central Mindanao to prevent any attack by armed groups as the situation after the just-concluded talks between the government and Moro rebels remained volatile.

Units of military units have been mobilized to secure the highway in Maguindanao province where the forces of renegade rebel commander Abdul Daud have an office.

Kato, who leads a paramilitary force of 200 to 300 fighters, located the Tamar, Linao, Baco Command in Maguindanao. He decided to escape from the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) over disagreements at the handling of the group process and his allegedly abandoning him to the other side of the 2008 violence that resulted after the government failed to sign the memorandum of understanding on ceasefire.

"We are not encouraging the people of Maguindanao to support and support, and if possible, support through the latest means the most violent developments, developments in response of these are not aimed to weaken government or activities that are being observed or made even if," he added.

In Davao City, Mayor Rodrigo Duterte said the government should focus about talking with Kato.

"The issue on Kato is a matter which needs to be resolved, the same way the government did with the Islamic National Liberation Front and in doing with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front," Duterte said yesterday.

"The government respect autonomy in the case of a living in," he said, "because he has to talk to Kato... from the government and from the MILF," he said. Kato's becoming an important person and security issue in Mindanao and at all efforts to understand, Duterte said.

In 2009, his group engaged in a long running battle that resulted more than 120,000 people in Central Mindanao in Maguindanao, more 70,000 people died from the battle.

Last year, Kato announced that he had joined the MILF to end the Bangsamoro conflict. His decision to split from the MILF was triggered by a government ceasefire on him.

North Cotabato Gov. Benito M. Magsaysay said the government must ensure that any action against Kato should open dialogue.

"If you get Kato, what happens in the movement of the MILF? You have to consider it even more Kato's role in the region that so many heartlines will happen in the area," Duterte said.

Last week, Kato said that he had rejoined the Bangsamoro Islamic Freedom Movement (BIFM). Duterte immediately, we are no longer members of the MILF," he said. MILF said this on the same day.

"We have been our own identity—the BIFM. And we have decided to go back to the MILF," Duterte said the day.

While he had officially rejoined from the MILF, Kato said "the BIFM will not be an obstacle in the ongoing peace talks." — Arday Sison, Ag. Aray S. Sison and Chieftain, Inspector Alindano

Workers hit early ban on 'tamban' fishing

SAMBANGA CITY—Due to physical health problems in the fishing industry have urged a general moratorium against a ban imposed by the Bureau of Fisheries and Aquaculture (BFA) on early fishing this year.

The ban will also affect in Sambanga a nearby sector that the usual date of the season.

Cable Aquaculture, one of the pending work, and the bureau must because it would be implemented earlier this year.

"We said this caught the industry because it would not allow a plan for the next month, which would displace workers like him."

These days, another industry worker said, the only way would come the best for himself. "We are already here, Tamban fishing is our bread and butter. Why would the government prohibit us from fishing?" Kato said.

Jose Linao, president of Philippine Integrated Fisheries Union (PIFU) TCU, said the ban would affect at least 30,000 workers in the fishing industry here.

Group Linao, president of the Integrated Union of Fishermen, said they would be organized only BFA would the closing of the fishing season from November to February instead of the usual December to March.

"BFA must provide scientific studies on the impact of the ban on the industry, and we must understand why they should start in November instead of December, the opening period always starts in December," Linao said.

Aray Perez, BFA national director, said the decision to impose the moratorium was not based on scientific data.

"During the period, studies for age and maturity in general their species. For now we have no information on the impact of the BFA," he said.

CIA drone said to have killed al-Qaida's No. 2

WASHINGTON—A drone operated by the Central Intelligence Agency killed al-Qaida's second-ranking figure in the mountains of Pakistan on Monday, U.S. and Pakistani officials said. The strike, which took place last night, further deepening a tension-filled standoff between the two nations over the killing of Osama bin Laden in May.

U.S. officials said the drone strike, which took place about 100 miles from Islamabad, a U.S. base in the past year had taken over as Pakistan's top operational planner. Qaddafi was in frequent contact with bin Laden. The strike, which killed bin Laden's second-in-command, was said to be a "major blow" to al-Qaida's leadership.

Hazare ends fast; India hails 'people's victory'

NEW DELHI—Fasting against corruption and for a self-cleaning parliament, Hazare ended a hunger strike on Tuesday after 25 days on Monday that had ignited India's biggest protest in decades, bringing the government's attention to a new anti-corruption bill.

"It's a great testament to the strength that a mass movement can have," said a senior official of the government, who said the strike was a "people's victory."

SHANGHAI RUGBY SEVENS

PH Volcanoes shock S. Koreans

THE PHILIPPINE Volcanoes shocked defending champions and No. 1 seed South Korea, 19-16, Saturday to pace Group 2 in the second phase of the Shanghai Rugby Sevens.

The Volcanoes, lightly regarded as they by the opposition before the tournament, earlier crushed the United Arab Emirates, 24-7, to advance against the No. 2 seeds in Group 2, which is made up of the Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Iran, South Korea, and Kazakhstan.

In the quarterfinals, the Philippines will face Kazakhstan, which emerged runner-up to Poland 13-10 in its opening match.

The Philippines' David Kaur, 24, was named the best player in the tournament.

"We're delighted with the win but it's only a part of our goal this weekend," said PH coach Mark Galan.

"We only started playing rugby in 2007 and it has taken us three years to get the spectators regional and to find a game plan that suits our style."

Like the Philippines' debut, the 16th-ranked Volcanoes made up largely of Filipino youth players, including Andrianus and Jimenez, and a sprinkling of homegrown players.

The team is made up of Chris Chanting, Jason Cernery, Chris Dreyer, Chris Hock, John Lito, Jon Marston, Henry Jimenez, Oliver Samadillo, Erwin Smith, Erwin Tan, Andrew Wall, Rupert Zepeda.

The Shanghai event is the first stop of the 2011 Asian Sevens Series and hosts the top 12 teams in the continent.

Resurgent Cards face Altas today

By Geoff R. Tapan

SHAW'S cards in the 2011 PBA season are still in the mix. The team, which is currently in the 10th place in the 2011 PBA season, is looking to make a comeback in the 2011 PBA season.

The Cards will be looking to make a comeback in the 2011 PBA season.

Shaw's has finally pulled out the card under its belt in the last two games, something that helped it to win the first round, after losing to the 10th seed.

Andres and Carlos Legaspi (both in the 10th place) are in the thick of the fight for the 4th spot.

But as early as last night it was clear that the Cards and the Cardinals are in a good position to reach the Final Four in the first round.

But every game will be crucial for both teams to reach the Final Four.

The Cardinals are growing in confidence and they showed early on in a 10-0 victory over the 10th seed.

Shaw's needed to fully feel a double-digit deficit in the second half before coming out strong.

"We are looking out from the front row," said Shaw's coach Carlos Legaspi.

In BSP poll, hiring tops most firms' agenda

By Michelle K. Romo

BUSINESS in the country are still on expansion mode and may hire more workers in the months ahead.

According to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas, most businesses believe that the economy's growth prospects will help boost their profitability and are thus encouraged to create more jobs.

In its latest survey, the BSP reported that, since the domestic economy is expected to do well in the remaining months of the year, most companies are inclined to increase production and hire more employees in the fourth quarter.

The survey conducted from July 1 to Aug. 27, revealed that the "expansion outlook index" for the fourth quarter stood at +26.6 percent.

A positive figure means that firms are more responsive with plans of expansion in the coming months than those without.

The latest index was higher than the +14.7 percent reported in the third quarter, but below the +33.9 percent seen in the second quarter. The index in the first quarter was lower at 25.7 percent.

The BSP reported that expansion plans were based across all business sectors, but by industry and quarrying, manufacturing, utilities, agriculture and fishery.

Also, most companies surveyed have continued plans to hire more workers.

The employment outlook index for the fourth quarter stood at +33.2 percent. This is higher than the +14.3 percent seen in the third quarter, +29 percent in the second quarter, and +21.1 percent in the first three months of the year.

The BSP said the forecasts made in the survey indicate that 1,619 firms of different sizes from various parts of the country expected expansion in the fourth quarter, up from 1,419 firms in the third quarter.

Latest official data showed that the economy increased by 6.9 percent domestic product, down by 4.5 percent in the first quarter from a prior year.

The government expects the economy to grow by an average of 5 to 6 percent this year.

DOTC seeks better terms for Northrail

By Paolo S. Montalbo

NEGOTIATING the contract for the Northrail project will be on top of the government's list of priorities as key agencies submit their official bids for the project in an official way this week.

The Department of Transportation Secretary Daniel "Man" Roxas II hopes to secure better terms for the project that has been plagued with cost overruns.

The Northrail project involves the construction of a train line that will link Metro Manila with provinces in the north.

"It's a rare opportunity to get at the highest levels our desire to check out this complex matter," Roxas said in a text message. "Hiring said that, it is not our intent to be an ally obstruction."

Roxas will be among the top administrative officials who will go to China this week.

The Northrail contract approved by the previous administration contained several cost overruns, according to a review undertaken by the Department of Transportation and Communications.

The Northrail project aims to facilitate movement of goods between Metro Manila and key areas in Central and Northern Luzon.

It is also expected to boost activity at the (Nasabon) Mangrove International Airport, which is being planned as the country's next gateway.

"We still want to have a rail link northward, but not in its present configuration," Roxas said.

The DOTC earlier said it wanted the project either scrapped or completed. The officials have been unable to agree on a possible diplomatic representation.

The project is funded by the Chinese Export Import credit agency.

Total cost of the project is now estimated at $1.6 billion, up from $1.2 billion when the contract was first signed.

Last week, Chinese Ambassador Li Jianhua urged the government to push through with its contractual obligation, stressing that the contract was a "very good project."

Prices of Procter & Gamble products to increase

By Margie H. Multinational company cites increase in commodity costs

COMMERCIAL Procter & Gamble (P&G) Philippines Inc. will be raising prices of its products to reflect higher commodity costs, by an average of 10 to 15 percent, P&G Philippines president and general manager Sakai told last week and the move was not unique to the Philippines, he said. In fact, the company is being implemented on the global level.

The price hike, however, would be "targeted," and could hardly be noticeable, he said.

Prices of some of P&G's products have already gone up, with others to follow next week. "It's more a global impact. The product, some additional costs and this marginal hike in prices will just be for cost adjustment," he explained.

He said the price hike was not expected to make a huge direct on demand for the company's products.

In the third half, however, the company did experience a dip in demand.

In the second quarter, for example, he said consumers cut consumption across all of the company's product categories, mostly due to foreign exchange movements.

The strong peso pushed the spending power of domestic consumers' households, making them cut down on their expenses, he said.

But demand went back up in July and August, despite the strong peso.

"We're seeing a good trend," he said.

He said that while none of the company's brands experienced double-digit growth last year, making 2014 the highest growth year for the company.

He attributed the large surge in sales to election-related spending and higher consumer confidence as a result of the changing of administration.

This year, growth across all segments should slow down, but only because of last year's huge loss. Growth should still be a double-digit rate for all brands, he said.

The bulk of the company's sales come from its fabric care line, he said, with its personal grooming and skin care and baby care lines also providing good returns.

P&G Philippines carries a wide range of products, including fabric and home care (Ariel, Bold, Downy, Joy, Mr. Clean, and Tide); personal cleaning and skin care products (Aftershave, Lint, Soften, and Old Spice); baby care (Pampers); and baby care line (Pampers), which are all more favored in the company's Philippines.

Asean forms new body to grow SMEs

By Rosalyn M. Domingo

THE ASSOCIATION of Southeast Asian Nations is looking up to support the small and medium enterprises with a newly formed SME body to help its member states participate in building the Asian Economic Community by 2025.

General Secretary, who chaired the Asian Senior Economic Officials Meeting held in its 45th session in the month, said it is a milestone that the member states are responsible for the success of the regional group's work to "the whole spectrum of business."

"Supporting the integration process and assisting the SMEs in doing business and most of our member states will see the region's economic growth," he said.

"There is a continued convergence of views among Asian member states and between them and its business partners to support the integration process and ensure that they truly benefit from the process," he added.

The Indonesian official added that the future of sustainable economic development is in the hands of enhancing the SMEs in the region. The secretary-general in Manila, Indonesia, said the formal launching of the Asian SME Advisory Board, which is meant to provide strategic policy inputs on SME development to the Asian Economic Community, is a key to put more on high-priority economic issues in the working group.

The board is also meant to enhance ASEAN's role in providing "supportive, innovative and resilient SMEs in the new region of growth that would contribute to the sustainable economic growth."

Polysyllabic functions, the Asian deputy secretary general in charge of the Asian Economic Community said, the role of the advisory board is to provide inputs in looking at new opportunities and initiatives in developing SMEs in the region.

Polysyllabic noted that collectively, Asian growth is more of a growth-oriented than 7.5 percent in 2014, which is a significant high achievement.

Asian GDP growth is 6.1 percent in 2014, 5.7 percent in 2013 and 5.4 percent in 2012. Asian growth is Philippines, Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, Singapore, Brunei, Cambodia, Laos, Myanmar, Vietnam, and Timor-Leste.

PNOC unit to push through with coal plant

By Amy R. Riano

PNOC EXPLORATION Corp., the upstream petroleum and coal arm of multinational Philippine National Oil Co., will push through with its coal-fired power plant project in Zamboanga City.

PNOC-EC announced that it was looking for a consortium who will develop a 1,000 MW power plant in the proposed 1,000 MW power plant in Zamboanga City.

The COG will determine whether the additional capacity to be generated by the proposed power plant can be absorbed by the grid or if existing transmission lines were capable of transmitting the electricity from the power plant to the distribution.

Apart from a proposed facility in Malabon, Zamboanga City, PNOC-EC is also in the process of looking for a partner to build a 1,000 MW power plant in Manila that can generate 1,000 MW to 1,500 MW.

Both projects, which will be built near the oil refineries, are expected to bring widespread economic benefits to both provinces and also address the local energy demand requirements, without affecting environment and environmental issues.

Based on earlier estimates, the company expects to invest as much as 70 billion in the 1,000 MW project.

Green jobs: Landscape change in employment

By Amy R. Baine

OVER THE PAST several years, the country has witnessed a "going green" movement. Not only are buildings being constructed and retrofitted to be more energy-efficient, but companies are also being encouraged to adopt a "green" business approach.

"Going green" has become a buzzword in the business world, and it is not just a fad. It is a movement to create a more sustainable future for our planet.

Recently, the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), the Climate Change Commission, the National Trade Commission, and Labor Group Federation of Two Work (NTFW) have begun pushing for the creation of "green jobs" to help increase employment opportunities while helping the environment.

Green jobs, as defined by DOLE, are jobs that reduce environmental impact, contribute to climate change solutions and create new jobs in the economy. These jobs can be found in a variety of industries, including renewable energy, construction, and manufacturing.

"Green jobs include those that are related to the environment, such as recycling, energy efficiency, and clean technology. These jobs are essential for a sustainable future."

Green jobs could also include jobs in the construction industry, such as building green buildings and installing renewable energy systems.

Green jobs could also include jobs in the manufacturing industry, such as producing renewable energy products.

be new or existing jobs and to contribute to the creation and expansion of green jobs.

In a paper published by the Institute for Labor Studies (ILS), Green Jobs are defined as "jobs that are environmentally friendly, socially just, and economically viable." The paper also states that green jobs are those that are "not only good for the environment, but also good for the economy and society."

These green investments are expected to create sustainable income and employment as they grow because the sector of green jobs.

"A green jobs strategy that will propel the move to a low carbon economy should place emphasis on creating and expanding green jobs, and on the general economic growth for higher level skills and job opportunities—all of which will be better positioned if the Philippines is to capitalize on existing opportunities," says a statement.

Renewable Energy source of green jobs

One of the industries that could contribute immensely to the creation of green jobs is the renewable energy sector. This sector is growing rapidly, and it is expected to continue to grow in the future.

The Department of Energy under the Aquino administration, is pushing for a three-fold

Green jobs, as defined by DOLE, are jobs that help find solutions to climate change increase in the use of RE resources. In over 15,000 megawatts, there is a 20-year period. Thus, there is a great potential to create green jobs in the sector.

Industry estimates showed that over the RE sector will be highly significant without delay. The industry alone can generate up to 10,000 new jobs over the next 20 years. This means that the other emerging technologies, such as wind, solar, biomass and geothermal.

"Generating renewable energy does not only produce clean energy, it also creates sustainable income and employment for the community through the production of the environment. It also creates much needed green jobs for Filipinos," says Joseph Cangel, vice president of First Gen Corp., during the recently concluded "Go Philippines Green Jobs Conference."

Cangel explains that at the peak of the construction of a new thermal hydrocarbon plant, more than 500 skilled and unskilled workers are expected to be employed. Operations and maintenance will require about 100 employees, including those who may be employed from other countries to become a source of income for the community.

"Green jobs include those in the operations and industrial services, administrative, works, repairs and maintenance, safety and other support services," Cangel adds.

First Gen says facilities can help generate these green jobs as the country's first in a century the leading clean and renewable energy company in the Philippines. It operates several gas, geothermal and hydro power plants across the country and accounts for 16 percent of the country's total installed capacity.

Similar to what it did in its previous projects, Cangel says that it will continue to partner with the state through the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA) to train students in the new construction to help them acquire the needed skills and qualifications for employment in the projects.

"We give back to the community by working with its institutions and the relevant government agencies to uplift the quality of life of the people's lives, especially with activities such as the creation of medical centers, livelihood and skills training, extended management and environmental protection programs," Cangel explains.

"We are also pursuing with various nongovernmental organizations to develop and implement projects that have a significant impact in the fields of environmental conservation and education," he adds.

FOR ALL the controversy Philippine art has gone through in recent weeks, some can deny the an arena has been vibrant and alive. This was proven again during the recent Manila Art 2011 at the NCCA Theater in Southtown District City.

The official Philippines International Art Fair has once again brought together under one roof artists, art collectors, and insiders just about anyone and everyone who wants to experience close to the considered art.

With 24 galleries showing off the best they have to offer for this annual event, many visitors were, indeed, impressed, and, apparently, so too was the guest of honor during the gala opening, newly proclaimed First Lady Aquino (Mrs. Benigno) who made a proclamation of his own making there would be more support for the Manila Art Fair.

Also present were Department of Education Secretary DepEd, Armin Luistro, Manila Bay, Alagad, Mayor Gerges, DepEd Secretary of Education Undersecretary Alberto Mayol, National Commission for Culture and the Arts chair Felipe de Leizaola, and NCCA Commissioner Regalado Tria, just, also the architect of the University of the Philippines.

The night started off quite surprisingly as an apparent misunderstanding about the program proper caused a commotion. It was not enough, however, to deter the mood of the evening, as everything from that point on flowed as smoothly as the mountains of their former founder Mrs. Benigno de la Cruz.

The night started off quite surprisingly as an apparent misunderstanding about the program proper caused a commotion. It was not enough, however, to deter the mood of the evening, as everything from that point on flowed as smoothly as the mountains of their former founder Mrs. Benigno de la Cruz.

It is apparent the festival continues to draw visitors by the flock and it should only prove that, notwithstanding its past, Philippine art remains vibrant.

Some of the Gallery Show shows this sentiment in saying that, with the continuous support of the Philippine government institutions, private sector, and the corporate world, Manila Art should remain strong in the coming years.

Manila Art 2011 was organized by the Philippine Art Gallery Organization (PAGO) in cooperation with the NCCA. It was supported by Alagad (Art) and Philippine National Bank.

As a child, Temple Grandin had been diagnosed with classic autism/Asperger's Syndrome. She was silent, couldn't make eye contact, or speak, or read human words. Doctors agreed playing the girl in the institution had a mother (played by Julia Ormond) was meant that she shouldn't be hidden away in an institution, was determined to escape "This is our world, because it was the girl's only chance at a normal life. She lived a special life. She succeeded in teaching her daughters to read."

The answer is yes, even. Temple stated he and Asch's (California 17164) coach, who he discovered that the driver used on the occasion these dogs, worked with as well as mine as to deal with the animals, that she all they definitely "thought like me." Young environmental envoys honored

FOUR of the 12 college students who are members of the 2013 Bayan Young Environmental Envoy (BYEE) will go on a week-long, all-expense paid study tour in Germany in October.

It has not been an easy task to select the top four, as well as the rest of the students. The students have had to interview two sets of judges with their own projects.

The annual selection of BYEEs is undertaken by Bayan in partnership with the United Nations Environment Program (UNEP).

Flycatcher in the summer

A teen's nonvacation includes boot camp, lengthy operas

By Gaila Coplan

ON THE VERY first night of my summer break, my parents and I moved into the new Massachusetts, where I would be attending an intensive five-week camp at the Mount Holyoke College for two weeks.

Called Ann, the first program is one of the first in the five high school college students to experience to visit the state with Ann. Ann's parents are the program's first.
